Burial of Rose Postrophe.

Yesterday Rose Postrophe one of the unfortunate sisterhood of this city was buried from the house of Madame Phillips. Rev. G. R. Davis conducting the services. The dead girl lay in her coffin arrayed in pure white, her face with the lines of care and mental suffering eradicated by death wore a calm and beautiful expression.

The burial ritual of the Episcopal Church which is adapted for all conditions of life was read and then twelve of her former companions knelt by the coffin and joined in the Lord's Prayer, with tears and bowed heads.

The clergyman in his closing remarks stated that, although while living the deceased had been cast outside the pale of society it was his place to cast the mantle of Christian charity over the unfortunate woman who was now beyond the reach of censure and that many lives were blighted by a remorseless fate or crushed beneath a combination of circumstances when they might have moved in a career of usefulness and honor. He laid her in the ground in the hope that her all-wise Maker weighing her sins along with her earthly sorrow and misfortune would stretch the hand of his forgiveness from the mercy-seat of heaven.

Thrown From a Buggy.

On Wednesday night after the special train which brought the delegates home from Winnemucca, Mr. Evan Williams and Mr. James of Gold Hill got into a buggy go home when one of the nuts came off which let the wheel run off throwing the two from the carriage and dragging Mr. Williams about a block, their injuring was light.

SAINFOIN AND ESPERETTE.

An Assertion That They are the Same Plant.
Dan DeQuille has the following in a recent letter to the Salt Lake Tribune: The discussion of the good qualities of sainfoin and esperette and their adaptability to the climate and soil of the Great Basin region still continues. The Idaho Avalanche asserts that it has discovered that the two names belong to the same plant. Sainfoin has long been known and cultivated in England, where it thrives best on chalky lands. It is also an old and well-known fodder plant in France and other European countries.
Of Sainfoin mention is made by Webster, who says the name is derived from the French "satin," wholesome, and "foin," hay; or from "saint," sacred, and "foin," hay. Thus we may without much license call it "holy hay." Webster makes no mention of "esperette," which may be a new name for the old plant. In some tables (published in an agricultural handbook, published as far back as six years ago) I find esperette mentioned with other fodder plants of which the food value is given, though no mention of sainfoin is made. It ranks there about the same as red clover and alfalfa.
When we get our agricultural experiment station fairly under way at Reno, we shall probably find out about the fodder plants of the civilized world. It would only be decent for other stations to exchange ideas and discoveries with our Reno savants. It seems that already every kingdom in Europe has one or more of these agricultural experiment stations except Portugal and Turkey. It is no longer ago than 1852 that the first such station was established. It was at Mockern, near Leipzig in Saxony.
Connecticut established the first agricultural experiment station in America. In 1875 the Legislature appropriated $700 quarterly for two years to Wesleyan University, Middletown, to be used in carrying on the appropriate work of an experimental station. The work was conducted very successfully by Professor W. O. Atwater and his associates for two years, and the results are embodied in two reports, bound with the reports of the Connecticut Board of Agriculture for 1876 and 1878. The appropriation being limited to two years, the operations of the Station ceased July 1st, 1877. However the General Assembly in the meantime provided for the continuance of the experimental work, which has been shown to be highly useful, by incorporation; the Connecticut Agricultural Experiment Station, which was located at New Haven. This station not only publishes annual reports, but also issues very frequent bulletins containing such information as it is thought should be promptly in the hands of farmers. Such bulletins are sent to all the newspapers in the State for publication, and thus whatever is important is at once generally known. Had our Reno servants been in working order they would long ago have issued an "esperette and sainfoin" bulletin.—Gazette.

PACIFIC COAST ITEMS.

—Martin Pelster killed A. H. Dake at Auburn, Placer county, Tuesday.
—White boys show superiority over Chinamen in training hop-vines on poles and strings in Yuba county.
—The Columbia Canning Company of Portland suspended Tuesday, through financial connection with William T. Coleman & Company.
—Frank Mack of Scio, Or., last Sunday put a lighted pipe in a pocket containing shells while out hunting. A finger was blown off and a serious wound in the abdomen was inflicted.
—Henry Mullan, a miner at Grass Valley, failed in an attempt at suicide Tuesday through the non-explosion of a giant powder cartridge which he had lighted and placed his head over for suicidal intent.
—The latest fish story: A North Pomona man went up the canyon on Sunday and fell into a big eddy, the water sweeping him down over the falls. He was fished out by his friends, not hurt a bit, and when he felt in his pockets he found three trout, each seven inches long.
—Governor Waterman at the Sutter county Granger's picnic Tuesday, advised the farmers to cut up the farms if there was a demand for it, into parcels of five and ten acres, and not try to lay out towns as they have done in portions of Southern California where towns to accommodate a population as large as London have been boomed into existence.
—It is reported at Truckee that the Pacific Lumber and Wood Company received notice that their mill would be burned by Monday if the Chinamen were not discharged. They are still retained and notice, it is said, has been given that unless they are discharged immediately, Mrs. Burkhalter's residence will be burned. Her residence is the finest in Truckee. Detectives are busy seeking a clue to the incendiary.

Killing of Some of the Washoe Indians.

About a year ago a halfbreed Indian named John Shay roped an Indian up the railroad track near the old round house and killed him and skipped. The Sheriff looked for him but failed to find him. The affair was settled among themselves and he was allowed to return which he did and has been around here for a few months until Sunday when he was shot on Main street by the brother of the Indian that Shay had killed a year ago. The Indian then waited around to see if he had made a good job of it and then went for the mountains by a trail that leads to Marlett and Folsom's wood camp where he hid himself in an old deserted cabin about a quarter of a mile above old man Veasey's ranch. He had been informed that a runner had been sent over to the wood camp to tell some of Shay's friends whom he wished to kill also and at dusk Monday night when the four friends of Shay came along opened fire on them and killed two the other two ran and escaped to town and reported to the officers who went out to search for him. The two Indians were both well behaved and hard working men and never drank. Chas. W. Friend, Auther Davison and Terrence Brady went out and brought in the bodies and held an inquest over them Tuesday. They were buried Wednesday by the County.

It was also reported among the Indians yesterday that this desperate Indian had killed two more Indians in Washoe Valley and said he would kill all the Indians he met and also any white man that interfered. He is armed with a Henry Rifle, and his brother is with him.
